times of strike, and the court has no more control of it than it would have over deposits made by them in the banks.

This decision is in harmony with two recent English decisions, Denabey, and so forth, Collieries v. Yorkshire Miners' Association and Lyons v. Wilkins.

Again I read from the bill—or from peaceably assembling at any place in a lawful manner and for lawful purposes, or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto.

Mr. YOUNG of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CLAYTON. I will.

Mr. YOUNG of Kansas. I am rather inclined to be friendly to your bill, but I would like to know from its author whether, in your judgment, if enacted into law it would legalize what is known as the public picketing business?

Mr. CLAYTON. I will answer the gentleman frankly. Peaceful picketing now is not contrary to law.

We believe we have brought you a good bill in the interest of the correct administration of justice, in behalf of fair play between man and man, placing the laboring man upon the same terms of equality before the law that the capitalist enjoys, and strengthening the courts as the indispensable and impartial arbiters doing justice in the controversies which arise between our fellow citizens. [Loud applause.]

APPENDIX.

[House Report No. 612, Sixty-second Congress, second session.]

REGULATION OF INJUNCTIONS.

Mr. CLAYTON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following report, to accompany H. R. 23635:

The Committee on the Judiciary, having had under consideration H. R. 23635, to amend an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, report the same back with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The too ready issuance of injunctions or the issuance without proper precautions or safeguards has been called to the attention of the Congress session after session for many years. The bill now reported seeks to remedy the evils complained of by legislation directed to these specific matters which have given rise to most criticism. These matters are so segregated in various sections of the bill that they may be separately discussed.

I.

The first section of the bill amends section 263 of the judicial code, which relates to two distinct steps in the procedure, namely, notice and security. But the amended section relates only to the notice, leaving the matter of security to be dealt with by a new section, 266a.

FORMER STATUTES.

In order to fully understand the subject of notice in injunction cases it is necessary to give an historical résumé of the subject. In the judiciary act of 1789, which was passed during the first session of that year, Congress having created the different courts according to the scheme outlined by Chief Justice Ellsworth, conferred upon the courts power to issue all writs, including writs of ne exeat (a form of injunction), according to legal usages and practice. In 1793, however, there was a revision of that statute, and, among other things, the same powers, substantially, were conferred upon the judges as before; but at the end of the section authorizing the issuance of injunctions, was this language: "No injunction shall be issued in any case without reasonable previous notice to the adverse party or his attorney."

The law stood thus until the general revision of 1873, during which period the law expressly required reasonable notice to be given in all cases. But the will of Congress as thus expressed was completely thwarted and the statute nullified by the peculiar construction placed upon it by the courts. The question frequently arose. The courts got around it in various ways, but usually by holding that it did not apply to a case of threatened irreparable injury, notwithstanding that its language was broad and sweeping, plainly covering all cases. Another form of expression often used is found in Ex parte Poultney (4 Peters C. C. C., 472):

"Every court of equity possesses the power to mold its rules in relation to the time of appearing and answering so as to prevent the rule from working injustice, and it is not only in the power of the court, but it is its duty to exercise a sound discretion upon this subject."

The court found a similar method of evading the sweeping prohibition of the revision of 1793, with respect to notice in Lawrence v. Bowman (1 U. S. C. C., Alester, 230).

But the earliest provision requiring notice came before the Supreme Court in 1799, in New York v. Connecticut (4 Dall., 1). Its constitutionality was not questioned. The only issue was as to the sufficiency of the notice, Chief Justice Ellsworth, for the court, saying: "The prohibition contained in the statute that writs of injunction shall not be granted without reasonable notice to the adverse party or his attorney, extends to injunctions granted by the Supreme Court or the circuit court as well as to those that may be granted by a single judge. The design and effect, however, of injunctions must render a shorter notice, reasonable notice, in the case of an application to a court than would be so construed in most cases of an application to a single judge, and until a general rule shall be settled the particular circumstances of each case must also be regarded."

Here was a case in which, although no point was made by counsel on any question of constitutionality, the Supreme Court accepted the comprehensive requirement of the act of 1793 as binding on all the Federal courts.

Now we come to the present law, found in section 263 of the Judicial Code, and reading thus:

"Whenever notice is given of a motion for an injunction out of a district court, the court or judge thereof may, if there appears to be danger of irreparable injury from delay, grant an order restraining the act sought to be enjoined until the decision upon the motion; and such order may be granted with or without security, in the discretion of the court or judge."

This was the law as contained in section 718 of the Revised Statutes, said section having been enacted in 1872. It simply embodies the practice of the courts with respect to notice, a practice established notwithstanding the nonconformity of the practice to the positive requirement of the act of 1793.

PROPOSED CHANGES.

But it will be seen that the giving of notice and requiring security, left by the present law to the discretion of the court, is by this bill a positive duty, except where irreparable and immediate injury might result from the giving of a notice or the delay incident thereto, in which case the court or judge may issue a temporary restraining order pending the giving of the notice. The concluding part of the amended section has an effect to safeguard parties from the reckless and inconsiderate issuance of restraining orders. Injuries compensable in damages recoverable in an action at law are not treated or considered by the courts as irreparable in any proper legal sense, and parties attempting to show why the injury sought to be restrained is irreparable would often disclose an adequate legal remedy. This provision requires the reason to appear in the order, but it should be read in connection with the new section 266b, requiring the order to be made by the court or judge to be likewise specific in other essentials, and section 266c, requiring that every complaint filed for the purpose of obtaining the order, in the cases there specified, shall contain a particular description of the property or property right for which the prohibitive power of the court is sought, and that such complaint shall be verified.

A valuable provision of the amendment is one that a restraining order issued without notice "shall by its terms expire within such time after entry, not to exceed seven days, as the court or judge may fix, unless within the time so fixed the order is extended or renewed for a like period, after notice to those previously served, if any, and for good cause shown, and the reasons for such extension shall be entered of record."

A legislative precedent for such legislation is found in the act of 1807, wherein it was provided that injunctions granted by the district courts "shall not, unless so ordered by the circuit court, continue longer than to the circuit court next ensuing, nor shall an injunction be issued by a district judge in any case where a party has had a reasonable time to apply to the circuit court for the writ." (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 2, p. 418.)

If the views of President Taft on this subject have not changed, he will welcome an opportunity to approve a bill containing such provisions as those in the amendment governing notice, because in his message of December 7, 1909, to the regular session of the Sixty-first Congress, after a quotation from the Republican platform of 1908, he said:

"I recommend that in compliance with the promise thus made appropriate legislation be adopted. The ends of justice will best be met and the chief cause of complaint against ill-considered injunctions without notice will be removed by the enactment of a statute forbidding hereafter the issuing of any injunction or restraining order, whether temporary or permanent, by any Federal court without previous notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard on behalf of the parties to be enjoined; unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that the delay necessary to give such notice and hearing would result in irreparable injury to the complainant, and unless, also, the court shall from the evidence make a written finding, which shall be spread upon the court minutes, that immediate and irreparable injury is likely to ensue to the complainant, and shall define the injury, state why it is irreparable, and shall also indorse on the order issued the date and the hour of the issuance of the order. Moreover, every such injunction or restraining order issued without previous notice and opportunity by the defendant to be heard should by force of the statute expire and be of no effect after seven days from the issuance thereof or within any time less than that period which the court may fix, unless within such seven days or such less period the injunction or order is extended or renewed after previous notice and opportunity to be heard.

"My judgment is that the passage of such an act, which really embodies the best practice in equity and is very likely the rule now in force in some courts, will prevent the issuing of ill-advised orders of injunction without notice and will render such orders, when issued, much less objectionable by the short time in which they may remain effective."

II.

Section 266a simply requires security for costs and damages in all cases, leaving it no longer within the discretion of the courts whether any such security or none shall be given.

Prior to the said act of 1872 (contained in the revision of 1873) there appears to have been no legislation on the matter of security in injunction cases; but that security was usually required is a fact well known to the legal profession. It seems clearly just and salutary that the extraordinary writ of injunction should not issue in any case until the party seeking it and for whose benefit it issues has provided the other party with all the protection which security for damages affords.

It appears by the authorities, both English and American, to have been always within the range of judicial discretion, in the absence of a statute, to waive security, though better practice has been to require security as a condition to issuing restraining orders and injunctions.

The new section, 266a, takes the matter of requiring security out of the category of discretionary matters, where it was found by the Committee on Revision and permitted to remain.

For a discussion of the existing law on the question of security, we refer to Russell v. Farley (105 U. S., 433).

III.

Section 266b is of general application. Defendants should never be left to guess at what they are forbidden to do, but the order "shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the bill of complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained." It also contains a safeguard against what have been heretofore known as dragnet or blanket injunctions, by which large numbers may be accused, and eventually punished, for violating injunctions in cases in which they were not made parties in the legal sense and of which they had only constructive notice, equivalent in most cases to none at all. Moreover, no person shall be bound by any such order without actual personal notice.

EXISTING LAW AND PRACTICE.

There was heretofore no Federal statute to govern either the matter of making or form and contents of orders for injunctions. Of course, where a restraining order is granted that performs the functions of order, process, and notice. But the writ of injunction, where temporary, is preceded by the entry of an order, and where permanent by the entry of a decree.

The whole matter appears to have been left, both by the States and the Federal Government, to the courts, which have mostly conformed to established principles.

The most important of these was that the order should be sufficiently clear and certain in its terms that the defendants could by an inspection of it readily know what they were forbidden to do.

See Arthur v. Oakes, 63 Fed. Rep., 310, 25 L. R. An., 414; St. Louis Min., etc., Co. v. Co. c. Montana Min. Co., 58 Fed. Rep., 129; Sweet v. Mangham, 4 Jur., 479; 9 L. J. Ch., 323, 34 Eng. Ch., 51; Cother v. Midland R. Co., 22 Eng. Ch., 469.

It should also be in accordance with the terms of the prayer of the bill. (State v. Rush County, 35 Kans., 150; McEldowney v. Lowther, 49 W. Va., 348.) It should not impose a greater restraint than is asked or is necessary (Shubert v. Angeles, 80 N. Y., App. Div., 625; New York Fire Dept. v. Baudet, 4 N. Y. Supp., 206), and should be specific and certain. (Orris v. National Commercial Bank, 81 N. Y. App. Div., 631; St. Rege's Paper Co. v. Santa Clara Lumber Co., 55 N. Y. App. Div., 225; Norris v. Cable, 8 Rich (S. C.), 58; Parker v. First Ave. Hotel Co., 24 Ch. Div., 282; Hackett v Baiss, L. R., 20 Eq., 494; Dover Harbour v. London, etc., R. Co., 3 De G. F. & J., 559; Low v. Innes, 4 De G. J. & S., 286.)

So it appears that section 266b really does not change the best practice with respect to orders, but imposes the duty upon the courts, in mandatory form to conform to correct rules, as already established by judicial precedent.

That such provision is necessary and timely will appear upon an inspection of some orders which have issued.

For instance, take the case of Kansas & Texas Coal Co. v. Denney, decided in the district court for Arkansas in 1899. And here, as in most of such cases, no full official report of the case can be obtained, but a mere memorandum. In this case the defendants (strikers) were ordered to be and were enjoined from "congregating at or near or on the premises of the property of the Kansas & Texas Coal Co. in, about, or near the town of Huntington, Ark., or elsewhere, for the purpose of intimidating its employees or preventing said employees from rendering service to the Kansas & Texas Coal Co. from inducing or coercing by threats, intimidation, force, or violence any of said employees to leave the employment of the said Kansas & Texas Coal Co., or from in any manner interfering with or molesting any person or persons who may be employed or seek employment by and of the Kansas & Texas Coal Co. in the operation of its coal mines at or near said town of Huntington, or elsewhere."

It will be observed that a defendant in that suit would render himself liable to punishment for contempt if he met a man seeking employment by the company in a foreign country and persuaded him not to enter its service.

The bill further provides that it shall be "binding only upon parties to the suit, their agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, or those in active concert with them, and who shall by personal service or otherwise have received actual notice of the same." Unquestionably this is the true rule, but unfortunately the courts have not uniformly observed it. Much of the criticism which arose from the Debs case (64 Fed. Rep., 724) was due to the fact that the court undertook to make the order effective not only upon the parties to the suit and those in concert with them, but upon all other persons whomsoever. In Scott v. Donald (165 U. S., 117) the court rebuked a violation by the lower court in the following language:

"The decree is also objectionable because it enjoins persons not parties to the suit. This is not a case where the defendants named represent those not named. Nor is there alleged any conspiracy between the parties defendant and other unknown parties. The acts complained of are tortious and do not grow out of any common action or agreement between constables and sheriffs of the State of South Carolina. We have indeed a right to presume that such officers, though not named in this suit, will, when advised that certain provisions of the act in question have been pronounced unconstitutional by the court to which the Constitution of the United States refers such questions, voluntarily refrain from enforcing such provisions; but we do not think it comports with well-settled principles of equity procedure to include them in an injunction in a suit in which they were not heard or represented or to subject them to penalties for contempt in disregarding such an injunction. (Fellows v. Fellows, 4 John. Chan., 25, citing Iveson v. Harris, 7 Ves., 257.)

"The decree of the court below should therefore be amended by being restricted to the parties named as plaintiff and defendants in the bill, and this is directed to be done, and it is otherwise."

IV.

Section 266c is concerned with cases between "employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving or growing out of a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment."

The first clause of the new section 266c relates to the contents and form of the complaint. It must disclose a threatened irreparable injury to property or to a property right of the party making the application for which there is no adequate remedy at law. And the property or property right must be described "with particularity."

These requirements are merely those of good pleading and correct practice in such cases established by a long line of precedents, well understood by the profession and which should be but perhaps have not been uniformly applied. To show this it is only necessary to briefly state the applicable rules, citing some of the numerous authorities.

As the granting of an injunction rests in some degree in the discretion of the chancellor, allegations in the complaint should show candor and frankness. (Moffatt v. Calvert County Comm'rs, 97 Md., 266; Johnston v. Glenn, 40 Md., 200; Edison Storage Battery Co. v. Edison Automobile Co., 67 N. J. Eq., 44; Sharp v. Ashton, 3 Ves. & B., 144.)

The omission of material facts which, in the nature of the case, must be known to the plaintiff will preclude the granting of the relief. (Sprigg v. Western Tel. Co., 46 Md., 67; Walker v. Burks, 48 Tex., 206.)

An injunction may be refused if the allegations are argumentative and inferential. (Battle v. Stevens, 32 Ga., 25; Warsop v. Hastings, 22 Minn., 437.)

The allegations of the complaint must be definite and certain. (St. Louis v. Knapp Co., 104 U. S., 658.)

The complaint must set forth the facts with particularity and minuteness (Minor v. Terry, Code Rep. N. S. (N. S.), 384), and no material fact should be left to inference. (Warsop v. Hastings, 22 Minn., 437; Philphower v. Todd, 11 N. J. Eq., 54; Perkins v. Collins, 3 N. J. Eq., 482.)

Facts, and not the conclusions or opinions of the pleader, must be stated. (McBride v. Ross (D. C.), 13 App. Cas., 576.)

An injunction should not ordinarily be granted when the material allegations are made upon information and belief. (Brooks v. O'Hara, 8 Fed. Rep., 529; In re Holmes, 3 Fed. Rep. Cases, No. 1, 562.)

The complaint must clearly show the threats or acts of defendant which cause him to apprehend future injury. (Mendelson v. McCabe, 144 Cal., 230; Ryan v. Fulghurn, 96 Ga., 234.) And it is not sufficient to allege that the defendant claims the right to do an act which plaintiff believes illegal and injurious to him, since the intention to exercise the right must be alleged. (Lutman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 56 Ohio St., 433; Attorney General v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis., 400.)

The bill must allege facts which clearly show that the plaintiff will sustain substantial injury because of the acts complained of. (Home Electric Light, etc., Co. v. Gobe Tissue Paper Co., 146 Ind., 673; Boston, etc., Ry. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass., 230; McGovern v. Loder (N. J. Ch., 1890), 20 Atl. Rep., 209; Smith v. Lockwood, 13 Barb., 209; Jones v. Stewart (Tenn. Ch. App., 1900), 61 Sev., 105; Spokane St. R. Co. v. Spokane, 5 Wash., 634; State v. Eau Claire, 40 Wis., 533.) And it is not sufficient to merely allege injury without stating the facts. (Giffing v. Gibb, 2 Black, 519; Spooner v. McConnell, 22 Fed. Cases No. 13245; Bowling v. Crook, 104 Ala., 130; Grant v. Cooke, 7 D. C., 165; Coast Line R. Co. v. Caben, 50 Ga., 451; Dinwiddie v. Roberts, 1 Greene, 363; Wabaska Electric Co. v. Wymore Co., Nebr., 199; Lubrs v. Sturtevant, 10 Or., 170; Farland v. Wood, 35 W. Va., 458.)

Since the jurisdiction in equity depends on the lack of an adequate remedy at law, a bill for an injunction must state facts from which the court can determine that the remedy at law is inadequate. (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Tr. Co., 157 U. S., 429; Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Anniston, 96 Fed. Rep., 661.)

If the inadequacy of the legal remedy depends upon the defendant's insolvency the fact of insolvency must be positively alleged. (Fullington v. Kyle Lumber Co., 139 Ala., 242; Graham v. Tankersley, 15 Ala., 634.)

An injunction will not be granted unless the complaint shows that a refusal to grant the writ will work irreparable injury. (California Nav. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 122 Cal., 641; Cook County Brick Co., 92 Ill. App., 526; Manufacturers' Gas. Co. v. Indiana Nat. Gas, etc., Co., 156 Ind., 679.) And it is not sufficient simply to allege that the injury will be irreparable, but the facts must be stated so that the court may see that the apprehension of irreparable injury is well founded. (California Nav. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 122 Cal., 641; Empire Transp. Co. v. Johnson, 76 Conn., 79; Orange City v. Thayer, 45 Fla., 502.)

The plaintiff must allege that he has done or is willing to do everything which is necessary to entitle him to the relief sought. (Stanley v. Gadsley, 10 Pet. (U. S.), 521; Elliott v. Sibley, 101 Ala., 344; Burham v. San Francisco Fuse Manufacturing Co., 76 Cal., 26; Sloan v. Coolbaugh, 10 Iowa, 31; Lewis v. Wilson, 17 N. Y. Supp., 128; Spann v. Sterns, 18 Tex., 556.)

The second paragraph of section 266c is concerned with specific acts which the best opinion of the courts holds to be within the right of parties involved upon one side or the other of a trades dispute. The necessity for legislation concerning them arises out of the divergent views which the courts have expressed on the subject and the difference between courts in the application of recognized rules. It may be proper to notice, in passing, that the State courts furnish precedents frequently for action by the Federal courts, and vice versa, so that a pernicious rule or an error in one jurisdiction is quickly adopted by the other. It is not contended that either the Federal or the State courts have stood alone in any of the precedents which are disapproved. The provisions of this section of the bill are self-explanatory, and in justification of the language used we content ourselves with submitting quotations from recognized authorities. We classify these authorities by quoting first the clauses of the bill to which they have particular reference.

The first clause:

"And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do."

In Allis Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union (C. C., 150 Fed. R., 155), Judge Sanborn said:

"The conclusion to be drawn from the cases, as applicable to this controversy, is, I think, that the combination of the defendant unions, their members, and the defendant O'Leary, to strike, and to further enforce the strike, and if possible to bring the employers to terms by preventing them from obtaining other workmen to replace the strikers, was not unlawful, because grounded on just cause or excuse, being the economic advancement of the union molders, and the competition of labor against capital."

In Arthur v. Oakes (63 Fed. R., 310, 317), Justice Harlan, for the court, said:

"If an employee quits without cause, and in violation of an express contract to serve for a stated time, then his quitting would not be of right, and he would be liable for any damages resulting from a breach of his agreement, and perhaps, in some states of case, to criminal prosecution for loss of life or limb by passengers or others, directly resulting from his abandoning his post at a time when care and watchfulness were required upon his part in the discharge of a duty he had undertaken to perform. And it may be assumed for the purposes of this discussion that he would be liable in like manner where the contract of service, by necessary implication arising out of the nature or the circumstances of the employment, required him not to quit the service of his employer suddenly, and without reasonable notice of his intention to do so. But the vital question remains whether a court of equity will, under any circumstances, by injunction, prevent one individual from quitting the personal service of another? An affirmative answer to this question is not, we think, justified by any authority to which our attention has been called or of which we are aware. It would be an invasion of one's natural liberty to compel him to work for or to remain in the personal service of another. One who is placed under such constraint is in a condition of involuntary servitude—a condition which the supreme law of the land declares shall not exist within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction. Courts of equity have sometimes sought to sustain a contract for services requiring special knowledge or skill by enjoining acts or conduct that would constitute a breach of such contract.
